

Coworking spaces in Ireland

Here is a list of coworking spaces in Ireland. It's growing all the time, so please let us know if we are missing any.

Coworking is witnessing tremendous growth. In the next three years, it is estimated there will be 26,000 coworking hubs internationally.

In Ireland, more and more coworking spaces and 'innovation hubs' are opening to cater for a growing army of flexible creators, entrepreneurs, and makers.

Research carried out by Emergent Research suggests that by 2020 there will be four million people working in coworking spaces around the world.

In America, 40% of the workforce will be freelancers, temps, independent contractors and 'solopreneurs' by 2020. (According to the American Bureau of Labour Statistics).

The trend is likely to be replicated in Ireland.

Why is coworking growing so popular?

Co-working spaces have become a great option for startups and professionals who cannot afford to maintain an office because of high rentals and deposits, as well as maintenance hassles. Typically, co-working spaces suit for all kinds of startups and freelancers due to the pay-as-you-use business model.

Coworking was an idea made current and popular in 2005 by Brad Neuberg, a software developer from San Francisco.

Coworking is different to incubators and business accelerators, as these models can often overlook the social aspect that coworking has to offer.

According to business and technology research firm Forester, an estimated 50 percent of workers (globally) will seek to work remotely by 2020.

It is thought that the number of available coworking spaces worldwide is doubling each year.
