What is Digital Dún Laoghaire?

Digital Dún Laoghaire is an initiative of Dún Laoghaire Business Improvement District. It was officially launched in September 2016 and aims to support the growth of digital companies in creating 450 new jobs over the next two years by building healthy collaboration within the town. Currently, over 60 digital/tech companies are located in Dún Laoghaire, ranging from startups (like Zoom Courier Software, A To Where, or NewsLinn) to international companies (like the Digital Marketing Institute, Rockall Technologies and Bank of Ireland Payment Acceptance). More information can be found here.
