The National Startup Awards, powered by Bank of Ireland and Enterprise Ireland, is open for entries and has a €15,000 prize fund.

The call is going out to startups all over Ireland. The National Startup Awards is open for entries with new categories and a total prize fund of €15,000.

The overall winner will walk away with a prize of €10,000, and the best early-stage startup will receive €5,000 to develop their businesses.

ALL SECTORS

The competition is open to businesses across all sectors which have been operational for up to five years.

There are three key stages to the competition with qualifying entries first shortlisted by region and then nationally.

To enter or nominate someone for a National Startup Award visit www.startupawards.ie and submit your application by Thursday, March 22.

"Entrepreneurship is fundamental to the national and regional economy and job creation, and I encourage ambitious startups to submit their applications in the coming weeks," says Julie Sinnamon, CEO of Enterprise Ireland.

"As Ireland's leading bank for business, we have worked with startups at all stages of growth, and we continue to be inspired by the women and men who are building, creating and innovating for the future. We look forward to supporting this year's entries from young companies that are making a difference," says David Tighe, head of Open Enterprise and Innovation at Bank of Ireland.
