

Grants and supports for Irish businesses

The vast majority of businesses need a helping hand at some point in their development. Here's a list of state supports for new and growing businesses.

A big supporter of SMEs and startups is the state itself. There are a large number of organisations that assist businesses to start, grow and expand. These organisations range from all-encompassing to sector-specific and provide a much-needed helping hand to thousands of businesses around the country.

Remember that competition for state grants and incentives is fierce, and agencies aren't giving money away for anything. It is also important to consider that, occasionally, non-financial support, such as mentoring, can be just as helpful as financial aid.
