
Merged Noledge Group to create 10 jobs in Dublin and Belfast

Two financial software firms Envisage and OSSM have merged under the new Noledge brand and are generating jobs in Dublin and Belfast.

Noledge, a new brand in the ERP (enterprise resource planning) and financial software market, is to create 10 new jobs in Dublin and Belfast on the back of a merger between Envisage and OSSM.

The new company is investing €120,000 to launch the new brand and forecasts a doubling in revenues in the next three years.

Noledge's new Belfast office will enhance sales and support in the Northern Ireland market.

The new jobs will be in product development and customer support services, along with sales and marketing roles and will be based in its Castleknock and Belfast offices. It will bring the total number of employees in The Noledge group to 42.

Post-Brexit and Covid planning

Noledge will continue to market Sage and NetSuite solutions under both the Envisage and OSSM brands and offer its combined customer base of 375 businesses across Ireland and the UK with a range of cloud-based ERP and financial software solutions best-suited to their individual needs.

“OSSM and Envisage are two long established software solution specialists and it made a lot of sense to join our forces under The Noledge Group to bring together our brilliant people and maximise their abilities,” explained Ray Ryan, managing director of the Noledge Group.

“We are the leading Irish Sage 200 cloud Partner and NetSuite Solution Provider and use our combined knowledge to help companies find the ideal technology platform to best address their unique needs and business challenges.

“While businesses face pressing challenges in the form of both Covid-19 and Brexit, we firmly believe that there are additional, fundamental long-term changes underway in how both customers and employees engage with businesses using technology.

“Those businesses that are prepared to embrace disruptive technology and capitalise on these benefits are best placed to survive and grow. Our job is to help bring about these disruptive changes to enable our customers compete in what is an explosively evolving business transactional environment,” Ryan added.
