

Six places for tech firms available in startlab Galway

Are you tech startup with the potential to scale? Are you interested in an incubation workspace and programme in Galway? startlab Galway is now open for applications.

There are six places now available at startlab Galway, powered by Bank of Ireland.

There are a few things to consider about Galway. First, it is a great city for startups. Second, it was recently voted the 'World's friendliest city'. Third, the cost of living in Galway is 22% cheaper than Dublin.

It's a great place and, startlab is based in a custom-designed building on Mainguard Street, literally in the heart of Galway city.

Successful applicants will benefit from a range of facilities, including desk space, high-speed wifi, conference rooms, as well as one-on-one sessions with essential coaches and mentors. Participants will also get introductions to investors and support from Bank of Ireland's innovation team.

"The ongoing collaboration with expert mentors and access to the bank's vast network helped us immensely when honing our offering, scaling the business globally, getting funding and attracting talent to work with us," says Brian O'Rourke, CEO of City Swifter, a recent 'graduate' of startlab Galway. "Galway is a fantastic place to start a business. The startup community here is thriving."

Applications are open until October 31, 2017. www.startlabhq.com.
